The Town Hall will discuss the issue of food waste, the activities of Food Waste Prevention Week, and the ways in which the efforts of all partner organizations working together at the individual, workplace, community, and policy levels can drive change. We encourage all who are interested in Food Waste Prevention to attend. Lastly, the State Office will be providing programmatic and administrative updates.

UC CalFresh Success Stories
Success stories from your FFY 2018 UC CalFresh participants can be shared through the online data entry portal: https://ucanr.edu/survey/survey.cfm?surveynumber=22089.

“I really enjoyed learning new recipes, especially the black bean and mango salad recipe. I am super excited that I learned how to use the resistance bands to exercise. Overall, I really appreciated learning about the price per unit so that I am more aware when I shop. I definitely plan to be more cautious when meal planning/meal selecting and eating.”
—Eat Healthy, Be Active Community Workshops Participant, Fresno County

“I found myself giving my son (5 years old) healthy food and snacks, but I did not follow healthy habits. I’ve reduced portions in meats, white bread, sugary drinks, [changed from] whole milk to low fat or Skim milk. I am more conscious about saving money at the grocery store and buy only the quantities we are going to eat. Using the information and making changes in my cooking, I’ve lost 7 lbs! Thank you!”
—Plan, Shop, Save and Cook Participant, Riverside County

Results Are In: UC CalFresh & EFNEP Staff Physical Activity Challenge

At long last—the results of the UC CalFresh & EFNEP Staff Physical Activity Challenge are in! Teams from 14 counties or county clusters participated in the PA challenge between July 12-25, 2017.

The PA Challenge was fun and a creative way for us to be role models for our adult class participants! We challenged each other to be more active ourselves. We also learned about the Eating Smart Being Active (ESBA) smartphone app—one part of the revised ESBA curriculum.

Steps recorded on the PA logs were totaled. Other types of physical activities were converted to steps using a conversion chart. Thank you to Michele Byrnes and Kelley Foster with the UC CalFresh State Office for their assistance! Teams were awarded an additional 10,000 steps per team member who submitted a photo showing the ESBA app on their phone. The final total for the team was divided by the number of team members to calculate the final score.

Congratulations to the Workout Warriors team from Santa Clara/San Mateo/San Francisco Counties! Their team took first place in the Staff PA challenge. Second place went to Placer/Nevada Counties, third place to Kern/Inyo Counties, and fourth place to Orange County.

Everyone who participated is a winner—we challenged each other to be more active—and had fun! Thank you to everyone who participated! We hope you enjoyed yourselves!

More Low-income Children Eating School Breakfast, But Too Many Still Missing Out

How many low-income children in your state start their day with a healthy school breakfast? Find out with FRAC’s just-released annual School Breakfast Scorecard. Nationally, on an average school day during the 2016-2017 school year, nearly 12.2 million low-income students participated in the School Breakfast Program and received the nutrition they needed to learn and thrive. In a companion report, School Breakfast: Making it Work in Large School Districts, 22 of 75 large school districts surveyed achieved FRAC’s benchmark of serving 70 low-income children with school breakfast for every 100 receiving school lunch. Both reports highlight how community eligibility and alternative breakfast models that move breakfast out of the cafeteria to service after the first bell have been instrumental in increasing school breakfast participation. Study shows benefits of exercise can outweigh health effects of severe obesity

Can you be fit and healthy even if you’re overweight? That’s the question researchers at York University’s Faculty of Health set out to answer in a new study that shows physical activity may be equally and perhaps even more important than weight for people living with severe obesity. According to the recent study, led by Jennifer Kuk, associate professor in York University’s School of Kinesiology and Health Science, and collaborator Dr. Sean Wharton, MD, medical director of the Wharton Medical Clinic and adjunct professor at York University, individuals with severe obesity who are fit have a similar health profile to those who weigh significantly less than them. The goal of the study was to look at the benefits of cardiorespiratory fitness on cardiovascular health in populations with mild to severe obesity. The results suggest individuals with even severe obesity, or a BMI greater than 40, can be fit and healthy. Data was gathered from 853 Canadian patients attending Wharton Medical weight management clinics in Southern Ontario. Individuals completed a clinical exam which included fasting blood measures and a maximal treadmill stress test. The amount of fitness necessary to achieve health benefits was far less than what most individuals would think. The research showed that the greatest health benefits come from avoiding the lowest 20 percent of fitness levels. This means that 80 percent of people are fit enough to get health benefits. Report: Energy drinks not safe for children, teens

Highly caffeinated energy drinks aren’t safe for children and teens, a leading sports medicine organization warns. The American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) released an official statement about the beverages. “Energy drinks are extremely popular, and concerns about their consumption are coming from every sector of society, which is why we’ve published these recommendations,” said Dr. John Higgins. He’s an associate professor of medicine at the University of Texas McGovern Medical School in Houston. Children and teens appear to be at particularly high risk of complications from energy drinks because of their smaller body size, and potentially heavy and frequent use, according to the statement. The Event-in-a-Box kit includes everything needed for community-based organizations to host and promote a successful statewide day of action. It includes event materials such as posters, handouts, displays, and press outreach materials. These days of action will be hosted on the same day across the state of California to ensure mass support and awareness on the specific health topics. Additionally, each toolkit includes a data collection tool that allows for measuring and evaluating event participation, so all organizations can track and report on their success.

All are invited to join this webinar to learn more about the upcoming statewide days of action and find out how to apply this kit for the first event, Rethink Your Drink Day, May 16. Registration for this Events-in-a-Box webinar is now live on the Statewide Training Calendar of Events.
